

Auggie oggi

Dragi učenici, roditelji i učitelji,

Donosimo vam prvi zbornik radova učenika Osnovne škole Augusta Šenoae na stranim jezicima. Naša je želja pokazati vam radove s nastave, iz domaćih zadaća ili projekata koje su naši učenici radili na engleskom ili talijanskom jeziku.

Učenje stranih jezika obogaćuje naše živote, širi naše spoznaje i vidike, uči nas toleranciji i čini strance manje stranima.

Odlučili smo zbornik nazvati Auggie oggi jer uključuje skraćeno ime August na engleskom, dok oggi znači danas na talijanskom. Što se ovih dana radi u OŠ Augusta Šenoae?

Ovdje je samo dio radova naših marljivih, mudrih i svestranih učenika koji se igraju i ozbiljno rade i istražuju na engleskom i talijanskom jeziku.

The Stone Age

The Stone Age was an enormous stretch of time in human history which lasted about 2.5 million years. It was first named the Stone Age in Victorian times when archeologists divided it into three periods. The oldest being the Paleolithic period, then come the Mesolithic and the Neolithic periods. This was based on the type of tools that people were using. Modern archeologists think that these categories are wrong, but the names are still used. The BBC podcast brings into light the final phase; the Neolithic period, also known as the New Stone Age. When I mention the Stone Age, you might think of cavemen, but these Neolithic people were closer in time to us than they were to people living in caves during the Ice Age. In Britain, the Neolithic started only six thousand years ago, and lasted for five thousand five hundred years. The Neolithic era was a period of time when the world witnessed the farming revolution. This was when people first started growing crops and keeping animals for food instead of hunting and gathering in the wild. This was very important because humans stopped roaming around and started living in one place: living in houses and villages. Archeologists think that farming started in Turkey and the Middle East about ten thousand years ago, but the people living in Britain took four thousand years to get the hang of it. They lived a lot like we do, but with much simpler technology and a lot more cardio exercise. They didn't have cars, bikes or buses, neither did they invent the wheel yet. They had to walk. The tools were made of wood, stone and bones. They built big stone monuments called Megaliths. When people died, they threw them in the river. In 1850, a big storm hit the Orkney islands on the northeast coast of Scotland. It exposed the tops of some ancient houses. Professor Child, an archeologist, did an excavation in the 1920's. He found a preserved Neolithic village that is now called the Sciarra Brey. The houses were made of stone. They had a fireplace in the center of the room. There were two beds made of stone with a hole in the center. You'd put animal skins to make it soft. In the kitchen they had a stone box where they would put some clay cooking pots. In one of these houses, archeologists found a human figurine made of whale bone. The doors were very tiny; probably to keep out the cold, biting wind. They lived near the sea, but they didn't eat fish, only in emergencies. Some even decided that they would rather starve than eat fish. They mostly ate the animals that they kept. They also had pet dogs. The Sciarra Brey had 100 people living there for about six hundred years. Even the Sciarra Brey is now close to sea, while in the Neolithic times it was much further in land. The Neolithic era ended in the Orkney islands probably due to the arrival of new people from Europe, bringing metal and the wheel. That is how the Stone Age ended, and the Bronze Age began.

My pet

I don't have a pet but I would like to have one- a snake.

My pet's name would be Draco. This is him: He is green anaconda with small green eyes. He is 2m long. He likes to eat mice and crickets and drink cold water. He likes to sleep and watch his prey before eating it. It is good that he isn't dangerous. I can't play with him as with a dog or a cat, but he is really not boring. Snakes are very interesting. Most people are scared of snakes but I am not. Draco is a bit lazy but very friendly. He always loves to hide from me in his tank. He is poisonous, but very nice to people, especially to me.

I would like to know more about snakes because I love them. If I am lucky, one day I will have a snake, my Draco. You guess, his name is after my favorite character from Harry Potter.

A flying coin

This story starts in Rome. Last summer my family and I went to Rome for a little trip. After the trip to Rome, we went to Venice. We explored everything. We ate traditional Italian food like pasta, pizza, and ice cream. Every day we had lunch and dinner in restaurants. We went to the famous Colosseum and we bought some souvenirs there. I bought a pen and a book. I took photos and filmed every single place we went to. I was so happy. We visited a little country in Rome. It (is) was the Vatican. I was amazed by the architecture there. We went to the famous Vatican museums and saw a lot of famous paintings by Leonardo Da Vinci, Raphael, Michelangelo etc. I was impressed. We took some photos there and went to church where we prayed and also saw the Pope. The next day we went to the Colosseum. It was so beautiful. We were with our tourist guide who showed us everything in it and then we could explore by ourselves. It was a nice day and we enjoyed walking there. There were a bunch of tourists and it was a little bit loud, but we loved every second in the Colosseum. In the afternoon we stopped by the ice cream shop. I ordered two scoops of ice cream in my two favourite flavours – cookie and strawberry. They put a lot of ice cream in the cone and it was really delicious. They also put two little, round waffles to make it look like Disney's Minnie. It was cute. When we finished eating, we went shopping and bought things. The next day we ate our breakfast in a little, vintage cafe'. All of us ordered orange juices and Rome's famous cake. My Mum told me that people in Italy eat only sweet food for breakfast and we in Croatia eat salty and savoury food, like cheese, ham etc. That day, we decided to visit Fontana di Trevi. The legend says that if you throw a coin in it, you will come to Rome again. My Dad gave us coins and we both threw coins in the fountain. I accidentally threw my coin on one tourist and the lady was very surprised to see a flying coin. I didn't want her to take my coin, so I decided to run and ask her to give me my coin. She laughed and gave it back. I was happy! My coin fell in the fountain and that means that I will be back in Rome (but after the Covid-19 pandemic). For dinner we ate pizza. Yummy! I will never forget this trip! It was so cool and full of excitement. I will definitely be back!

SCHOOL SUBJECTS

Which subjects are important and why?

Important subjects are: maths, Croatian, English, P.E.

Math because we need to know how to use the numbers.

Croatian because we live in Croatia.

English because it is official language in all countries.

Physical education because we have to stay healthy.

When should you study what?

From the beginning we should learn math, Croatian, English, P.E, art, R.E.

Then after four years we should learn music, history, geography, I.T, D.I.T, then after three years start with biology, chemistry and other subjects.

Which subjects are not important?

I think every subject is important. And we should learn them all.

My pet Leo

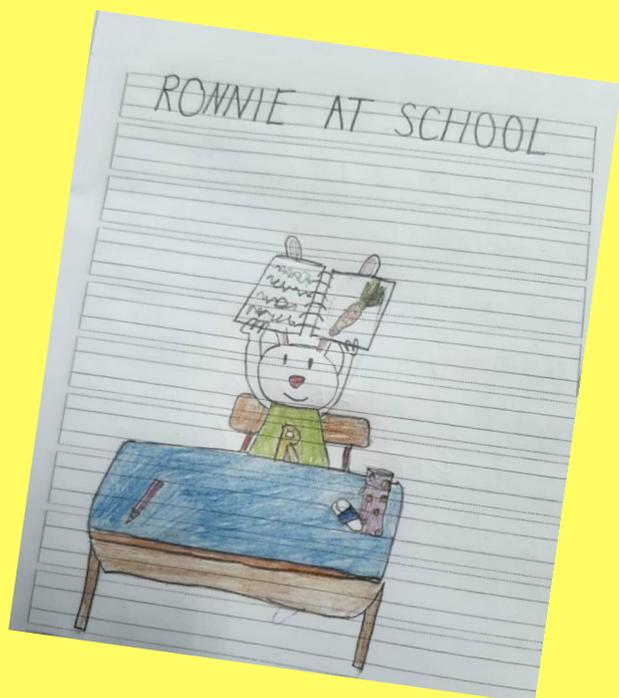

I have a cat called Leo. Leo is our 4th cat. He is cute, furry, cuddly and very colorful. He has big brown eyes, yellow fur and a big tail. He loves to eat a lot of cat food, to sleep and at night he loves to go outside with other cats. Our cat sleeps during the day because he needs to take a rest to go outside at night. Sometimes he is very clumsy, like one time he broke a vase with flowers, scattered the living room and he destroyed our house in a single night. Our grandma cleaned up the house when she woke up.

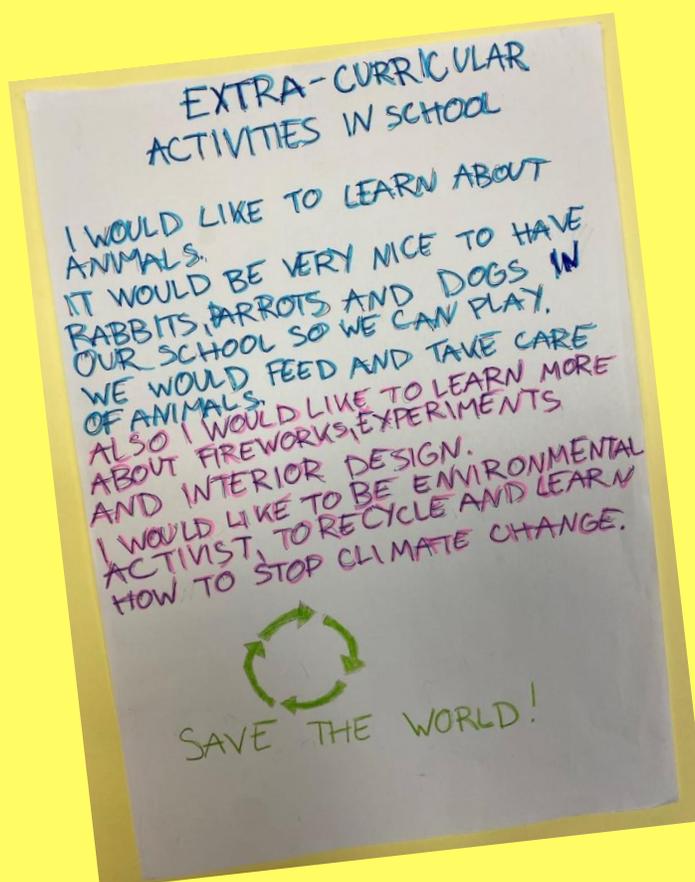

The good thing is that I don't need to take him for a walk because he is a cat and he goes outside alone. When he sleeps, our house is quiet and peaceful, but I always take him to my bed and he sleeps there. I like to be close to him when he sleeps because I like that purring sound.

Getting a cat as a pet is so good because you only need to feed him and let him out. I like Leo because when I am sad he makes me happy and because of him I am more responsible.

The gladiators were superstars of Ancient Rome.

The word gladiator comes from the Latin word gladius which means a short sword.

The first gladiator fight was organized 264 BC. In the beginning they were organized by very rich people, so they could look fancy and important, but later they were organized by emperor for fun. First gladiator fights were organized as funeral parties in cattle markets, not in big arenas.

At first, gladiators were prisoners of war and slaves. Later, when Rome became the Empire, half of all gladiators were volunteers because they were paid, they were provided with good food, nice place to live and a chance to become really famous.

They were part of the lowest class of people and they lived and were trained in gladiators schools.

Professional gladiators had access to medical care and massages.

Gladiators ate a lot of barley and because of that they had a nickname - barley boys.

The most famous gladiator is Spartacus. He escaped from gladiator school and organized a big rebellion. He and his big army were defeated and he died.

There were a lot of types of gladiators such as Murmillo, Thraxes, Retiarius, Essedarius, Hoplomachos and more. Each type of gladiators had different kinds of armour and weapons. Retiarius, for example, had a trident, a dagger, a fishing net and a small protection. Murmillo was heavily armoured, so he was very slow and he sweated a lot. Also there were female gladiators called Gladiatrixes and they fought against other female gladiators.

Gladiator games took place in arenas. The biggest arena was Colosseum in Rome. There were entrances for poor and posh people. The poor people were standing in the back with slaves and women and rich people were sitting in the front.

In the morning there were beast hunts, at noon public executions and in the afternoon there was the main event – gladiators fights.

Sometimes the arenas were filled with water and then there were organized sea battles.

Some emperors were fighting against other gladiators with wooden swords and, of course, they always won.

Gladiator games ended because Rome became Christian.

THE SCHOOL BUILDING AND THE GROUNDS

I like my school! The classrooms and the gym are nice. I like them and they aren't missing anything. It would be nicer if the playground had more equipment, but my school is still good without it.

Ema Pomper, 5.c

Rules in the school!

I don't like the look of the school building.

There is too much graffiti, but some are even beautiful.

Some classrooms are damaged, but not bad.

Playground isn't bad, but it was when there were no draws or games.

In the classroom where I am is a very small and damaged board, all professors complain about it. I don't know if anyone has already told the headmistress about that, but if they didn't they would need to replace the board.

Also before there was not always toilet paper, we only have it now because of the corona. The window in our classroom is broken.

Everything else is fine. The radiators have finally started working.

And I have to say that the food is good.

And that's all what I can say.
